

The Stony Brook University Open Access Policy: tools to support faculty

Hello & Welcome!

Darren Chase
Head of the Center for Scholarly Communication
Stony Brook University Libraries
darren.chase@stonybrook.edu

SBU University Senate adopted the Open Access Policy on February 6, 2017.

more information at library.stonybrook.edu/openaccess

How the Policy Works

1.

Faculty retain copyright to their work and issue to university a non-exclusive license to exercise rights under copyright, including distribution and display.

How the Policy Works

2.

Faculty deposit articles into an open access repository or publish them in an open access journal and provide a link.

How the Policy Works

3.

Faculty may opt out of the policy for any article for any reason.

Scope of the Policy

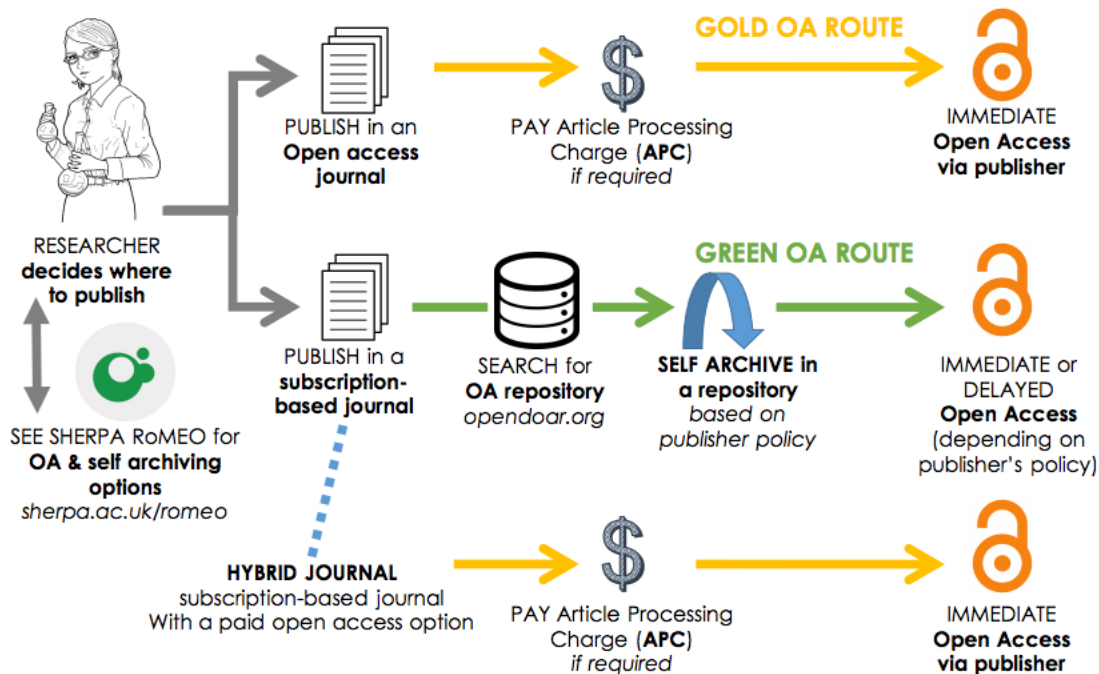

Covered:

- Faculty
- “Scholarly articles,” including materials published in journals, conference proceedings, etc.
- Articles with a publication agreement signed after February 6, 2017.

Not covered:

- Students
- Post-docs and researchers
- Books
- Popular, non-scholarly articles
- Fiction and poetry
- Lecture notes
- Articles published before the policy was passed.

Open Access Publishing

The SBU Open Access Policy Leverages Green Open Access

Authors retain copyright

Publish in the journals of their choice

Share accepted manuscripts in an OA repository

Avoid APC fees

Advantages of the Policy

The corpus of SBU faculty works will be made freely available and searchable, in full text.

Advantages of the Policy

Institutions with fewer resources, institutions in other countries, and researchers and patients worldwide benefit.

Advantages of the Policy

Open Access articles are read more often and are more highly cited than articles in subscription-based journals.

How To Deposit

- Manual deposit into SBU Academic Commons is available for all faculty.
- Submit a link to open access articles or manuscripts.
- Email accepted manuscripts to your liaison librarian or openaccess@stonybrook.edu.

Publishers

Publishers have been informed about the policy, including: Elsevier, Springer, Karger, Wiley, Taylor & Francis, SAGE.

Responding to Publishers

authors may

- request a waiver of their grant of license to the university on a per article basis.
- delay public access to an article via an embargo.
- Request an addendum letter for further making a publisher aware of the SBU Open Access Policy
